The Aesthetic: Deconstructed Houndstooth with Woven Depth

Kasuri reimagines the familiar rhythm of houndstooth as a softly deconstructed weave. Fine interlacing threads and broken geometric hints dissolve the classic motif into a richly textured surface, balancing tailored structure with organic irregularity. Subtle variations in tone lend the pattern depth, suggesting the character of individual fibres rather than a sharply defined repeat. Calm from a distance and intricate up close, Kasuri brings warmth and understated movement to interior walls. Paired with wood, warm metals and sculptural furnishings, it offers an inviting backdrop where textile tradition meets modern expression.
